

GCS Sponsors Weekly Cancer Awareness Program for Lake Community

Monday, February 6, from 2-3 p.m., Georgia Cancer Specialists (GCS) will hold the first in a weekly series of free health lectures at the Cowles Clinic in Lake Oconee as part of its ongoing commitment to educate the public in cancer awareness. Dr. Cheryl Jones will lead this week's class with her lecture titled, "Keep Moving to Prevent Blood Clots."

GCS, the largest private oncology/hematology practice in the Southeast, is hosting these weekly talks as part of Alive and Thriving: A Community Program for Cancer Awareness and Wellness, which will take place at the Cowles Clinic every Monday through June 26.

The GCS Cowles Clinic office is located at 1000

Cowles Clinic Way, Suite C 200, Greensboro, Georgia, 30642. The phone number is 706-454-0159.

"We're thrilled to be able to bring this program to the Lake community as part of GCS's ongoing education initiative," said Dr. Cheryl Jones of GCS.

Dr. Jones will discuss the dangers of blood clots, how they form, and how best to prevent them.